

of the while which was his only utterance, for sounds expressive of pleasure, and apparently also of gratitude. He no longer pretends even that he feeds, but eats bread and fruits with ravenous avidity. He walks erect, but with a strange awkward gait. His hands are perfectly formed, but he uses them awkwardly. A piece of bread tossed to him from a little distance, which he was eager to get, he could not catch, but let fall clumsy to the floor. He wears clothes, to which he was at first, as severe as the other boy. His forehead is low, but his face would hardly be called dull, and certainly not idiotic. His eyes have a wild and restless, but not an inquiring look. His jaws are not protruding, but his teeth are well formed and thoroughly human. On his left cheek are scars bearing plainly the marks of teeth where he once have been fearfully bitten. He has now taught to do some kinds of work, but not faithfully. He seems to have lost all desire to escape; he mingles freely with the other children among whom he has his favorites. When the boy first mentioned was brought to the orphanage this one was made to understand that he must teach the other how to eat and drink, and walk, and much of the improvement of the younger one in these respects seemed due to the efforts of the older one.

The inference from these extraordinary instances is strongly at variance with many affirmations now current. It does not point in the least to man's derivation from the lower creation, but exactly to the reverse. If we only look accurately and think closely, we shall find much evidence, both in nature and history, that the lower creation is man's dependent rather than his ancestor.

THROSTLES.

—When is an army like a hawk in a lady's skirt?—When it is hemmed in.

—How to roll in wealth—Marry a rich carriage-maker's daughter.

—When is a bosom-pin like a ship?—When it is on the bosom of a heavy swell.

—Mrs. Partington, reading of the strike of the wire-drillers, remarked, Ah me! what new-fangled things won't they wear next!

—It seems to be a pretty general opinion that Congressmen are more in need of back-bone than back pay.

—A second-hand furniture dealer on Michigan Avenue, Detroit, hung out a card last Thursday, inscribed "Buggy." For sale! and inadvertently hung it upon a second-hand bedstead on the sidewalk, where it attracted much attention.

—A clairvoyant trio, two women and a man, have been traveling in the south, pretending to cure epizootic by laying on of hands. They practiced on a mule in Kentucky the other day, and the firm has since dissolved.

—A charitable lady sent one of her last year's dresses to a destitute woman. She was somewhat surprised to have it returned, with the statement that it "was too bad behind for the present style," and would she take a breadth out and change the trimmings?

—A bright little boy hearing his father say that a man ought to "stick to his business," emptied a bottle of snuff-lace in the old gentleman's office chair. The old man says he has not been stuck so badly since 1857, and rewarded his offspring by taking him on a whaling trip to the back door.

—A Scotch postmaster, puzzling out a very uncertain superscription to an Irish letter, jocosely remarked to an intelligent son of Erin, who stood by, that the Irish brought a hard set of names to Scotland. "That's a fat yer honor," replied the Irishman, "but they get harder ones after they arrive here."

—A selfish California minister recently refused to perform the marriage service for a couple where the bride was his own abandoned wife. And that aggravating woman said that he "was just as mean as he always used to be."

—A rural lady in getting on a train at the Danbury station Saturday, was polite enough to knock at the car door. The brakeman managed to control his visage into a semblance of gravity until he got the door open, and then he precipitately adjourned. He said he thought he would snap his head off before he got through with it.

—The question of the period is discussed at the bar in Harper's this week's weekly, "First Rough," leaning for support against the counter, and gesturing, settling it thus: "Does education prevent crime? Not a bit on it. Look at, look at me—if I'd a bin to read, and spell, and sier wen I wos boy, why, with my disposition, I mite a bin a Hoax Ames or a credit Mobile or a Hesitor or a Protestant, or there's no knowin' wot blessed thing I miteen a bin?"

COULDN'T SELL IT.

The following is not new, but always good as an illustration of the truth that some of the finest sentiment crops out sometimes from those who walk in the lowly paths of life:

A gentleman was walking with his little boy at the close of the day, and in passing the cottage of a German laborer the boy's attention was attracted to a dog. It was not a King Charles, nor a black and tan, but a common car. Still the boy took a fancy to him, and wanted Pa to buy him. Just then the owner of the dog came home from his labors, and was met by the dog with every demonstration of dog joy.

The gentleman said to the owner: My little boy has taken a fancy to your dog, and I will buy him. What do you ask for him?

I can't sell that dog, said the Dutchman.

Look here, said the gentleman, that is a poor dog anyway, but as my boy wants him I will give you five dollars for him.

Yankee, says the German, I know he is a very poor dog, and he isn't worth nothing but dries up you leetle ding ma dat dog val I can't sell. I can't sell the wag or his dail vun I comes home at night.
